ABSTRACT

In a structure for rotatably supporting a rotary body including a rotary shaft of the present invention, the rotary shaft is assembled integrally with or rigidly affixed to end plates, which are fitted in axially opposite ends of the rotary body, beforehand. The rotary body is therefore rotatable relative to or integrally with the rotary shaft.

5